Detailed Action

1. The specification is incomplete in that it references two attorney docket numbers. Instead, please provide the corresponding U.S. Patent Application Numbers.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kinishi (996).

With respect to claim 1, Konishi (996) teaches an electronic device (shown by figure 2), comprising:

A sensor (34 and 35 for reading bar codes); a carriage (winding spool 6 and winding chamber 7 winding fork 19); a drive device (motor 16) as claimed; printed matter (bar code plate 12) containing servo control information located in a detection area of the sensor; a servo controller (microprocessor 31, according to col. 4, beginning at line 41 or mechanism 17). See figure 2.

What is not specifically shown, is the sensor, for reading the printed indicia, being mounted on the carriage as claimed. However, Konishi teaches a sensor element 21 located on a carriage portion of the motor shown in figure 2. A detector (sensor 15) is also mounted in such a way as to detect perforations 4a, for determining the film speed.

Although it is not clear whether the sensor for detecting the bar code plate 12, is located on the carriage, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art, looking at figures 2, 7 and 9a-9d, to observe a printed material from the perspective of the winding chamber 7 which is believed to at least house the sensor 21 for reading the speed of the winding fork 20 which can be used to control the servo mechanism which controls the speed of the printed matter as is performed by the present invention.

Claims Objected to As Containing Allowable Matter

Claims 2-14 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
